

WORLD BANK'S BAD BUSINESS IN URUGUAY

THE WORLD BANK BEHIND BUSINESS REFORMS IN URUGUAY

In the years following the 2001 economic crisis, the World Bank has used Uruguay as the poster child of an economy that has become stronger after following its development model. The Bank pushed for financial sector changes, including developing capital markets (the buying and selling of long term debt and other mechanisms) to improve the investment climate in the country. At the 88th position out of 189 countries, Uruguay enjoys a "good" score in the 2014 World Bank Doing Business rankings. This ranking reflects Uruguay's efforts to follow the directives of the Bank's investment climate team, which provides advisory services to the country. The current 2010-2015 strategy of the World Bank aims to help Uruguay further reform its economy and deliver greater competiveness. One key pillar of the Country Partnership Strategy is to

DOING BUSINESS REFORMS

- ✓ In 2010, Uruguay was penalized with a poor review in the Doing Business rankings due to a law that put in place preemption rights in property transfers, which establishes a "first right to buy," potentially affording a local administration or communities the opportunity to stop a sale that they do not want.
- ✓ In 2011, the World Bank praised Uruguay for reforming the previous year's law, and eliminating the need to obtain a mandatory waiver for preemption rights, making it easier for unwanted sales to go through.¹⁷ provide financial support for export-oriented agribusiness.⁵ It includes a Bank lending program of approximately $700 million, together with an active International Finance Corporation (IFC) program—private lending arm of the World Bank Group—and advisory services.⁶ All three of the IFC's active investment projects in Uruguay are in export-oriented agribusiness companies.

Large-scale foreign investment in Uruguayan land has increased dramatically in the past few years.⁷ In turn, this has driven up the cost of land in Uruguay, which rose 800% in the past decade.⁸ A total of 24,183 land sales were conducted between 2000-2009, representing six million hectares—39% of national territory.⁹ Land leasing has also become a significant feature of the Uruguayan land market. Between 2000-2009, lease instruments for more than 6.18 million hectares of land were recorded.¹⁰

Find out more and take action at: www.ourlandourbusiness.org

BIG LAND DEALS FOR FOREIGNERS

Some estimates show that foreign corporations now own over 1.8 million hectares and Uruguayans face the risk of losing more land. 83% of the land sold in 2010 (336,000 hectares) was bought by investors from Europe, New Zealand, Argentina, Korea, Brazil and the United States; though the vast majority are from adjacent Brazil and Argentina, where investors receive reduced exportation taxes. Argentinean nationals own almost all of the 500,000 hectares of Uruguayan soil designated for soy cultivation. More than 51% of the total land area under lease contractually cannot reveal the nationality of the tenant, a troubling fact in a country that is at risk for losing more of its land.

In 2013, the government drafted a law nominally limiting foreign ownership of land. Though the majority of the recent deals were purchases, several were leases or concessions, which means that this law is unlikely to be sufficient to stop large-scale land acquisitions. It remains to be seen if Uruguay will maintain its sovereignty and resist large-scale land acquisitions as its land prices continue to soar, and how its ranking on the Doing Business index will be impacted if the country takes further steps to limit foreign land investment.

ENDNOTES

- 1 MercoPress. "World Bank outstands Uruguay as a success story in economic and social recovery." March 22, 2013. http:// en.mercopress.com/2013/03/22/world-bank-outstands-uruguayas-a-success-story-in-economic-and-social-recovery (accessed April 4, 2014).
- The World Bank. Uruguay: Country Results Profile.2013. http://web.worldbank.org/WBSITE/EXTERNAL/ NEWS/o,,contentMDK:22882817~menuPK: 141310~pagePK:34370~piPK:34424~theSitePK:4607,00.html (accessed May 1, 2014).
- The World Bank. Doing Business in Uruguay. 2014. http://www.doingbusiness.org/reforms/overview/economy/uruguay (accessed April 4, 2014).
- International Finance Corporation. World Bank Investment Climate. Latin America and the Caribbean. 2014. https://www.wbginvestmentclimate.org/regions/latin-america-and-the-caribbean.cfm (accessed April 30, 2014).
- The World Bank. International Bank for Reconstruction and Development and International Finance Corporation Country Partnership Strategy for the Oriental Republic of Uruguay for the Period 2010-2015. 2010. http://www-wds.worldbank.org/external/default/WDSContentServer/WDSP/IB/2010/09/10/000350881_201009100 85046/Rendered/PDF/558630CAS.pdf (accessed April 30, 2014).
- 6 MercoPress. "World Bank outstands Uruguay as a success story in economic and social recovery." Op. Cit.
- 7 La Via Campesina. "The World Bank funding land grabbing in South America: Open letter to the International Finance Corporation about CalyxAgo." June 30, 2011. http://viacampesina.org/en/index.php/main-issues-mainmenu-27/agrarian-reform-

- mainmenu-36/1070-open-letter-to-ifc-pending-approval-of-the-project-calyxagro-proj-ref-29137# (accessed April 4, 2014).
- 8 MercoPress. Uruguay sends bill to parliament banning ownership of land by foreign companies or governments. March 30, 2013. http://farmlandgrab.org/post/view/18368-uruguays-farmland-price-jumped-eight-times-from-2002-to-2010 (accessed April 4, 2014).
- Trade Knowledge Network. Foreign Investment in Agriculture in MERCOSUR Member Countries. International Institute for Sustainable Development. 2012. http://www.iisd.org/pdf/2012/ foreign_investment_mercosur.pdf (accessed May 16, 2014).
- 10 Ibid.
- Bolpress. Bolivia: Mas de un millón de hectáreas en manos de extranjeros : El agronegocio brasilero tiende a concentrar la producción de soya. 2011. http://www.bolpress.com/art.php?Cod=2011032817 (accessed June 14, 2014).
- 12 Alvez, Alejo. "Growing concentration of land is in foreign hands." Latin America Press. April 25, 2012. http://www.latinamericapress.org/articles.asp?art=6612 (accessed April 27, 2014).
- 13 Lopez-Gamundi, Paula. "A Land-Grabber's Loophole." Council on Hemispheric Affairs. August 8, 2011. http://www.coha.org/a-land-grabbers-loophole/ (accessed April 4, 2014).
- 14 Ibid.
- 15 Trade Knowledge Network. Foreign Investment in Agriculture in MERCOSUR Member Countries. Op. Cit.
- 16 MercoPress. "Uruguay sends bill to parliament banning ownership of land by foreign companies or governments." Op. Cit.
- 17 The World Bank. Doing Business in Uruguay. 2014. Op. Cit.

Uruguay Doing Business Fact Sheet was authored by Dylan Farrell-Bryan.

Photo: Cattle ranch in Uruguay. © Peer Voss

The Oakland Institute
PO Box 18978
Oakland, CA 94619 • USA
www.oaklandinstitute.org • info@oaklandinstitute.org